

Mile 52.5 to Mile 58.2 - Map 10

This upstream view of the Malgosa Crest shows how Marble Canyon begins to widen in this reach. Marble Canyon ends at the Little Colorado River. (Tom Martin)

Mile 58.1, Left - Opposite Malgosa Camp is a medium-sized camp that often has some driftwood for winter fires.

Mile 57.9, Right - Malgosa Camp is at the middle of the Malgosa Canyon debris fan. This is a small, rocky camp, with a great sunset view.

Mile 56.6, Right - Kwagunt Camp is at the foot of Kwagunt Rapid. This is a popular, large camp with hiking options up Kwagunt Canyon.

Mile 56.3 - Kwagunt Rapid has a large pour-over in the center of the top of the rapid, along with a sleeper boulder near the left shore at the lower end of the rapid. The typical run is a left entrance, moving to the right once past the pour-over.

Mile 53.5, Right - Lower Nankoweap Camp is on the point where the current moves to the right to clear a cobble bar downstream. This is a medium-sized camp and is exposed to upcanyon winds. If you hike to the granaries, the trail will take you directly through the Main Nankoweap Camp. Please be respectful of the campers if it is occupied.

Mile 53.4, Right - Main Nankoweap Camp is a large, popular camp at the foot of the last eddy below the huge Nankoweap Rapid debris fan. You'll need to float down to the lower end of the eddy and then catch the eddy current into camp, which is at the downstream end of the beach. Day-use hikers should tie up at the upstream end of the beach.

Mile 53.4, Right - A popular hike from the Nankoweap debris fan is to the Nankoweap granaries. Follow the well-marked path proceeding upriver from the lower two Nankoweap camps. You will come to a fork in the trail. The left fork heads up a quarter-mile to the granaries high up at the base of the cliffs to the west. Please remind your group to not climb in/on, or touch these 1,000-year-old fragile walls. This is a wonderful moonlight hike if you are up for it.

Mile 53.1, Right - Upper Nankoweap Camp is a medium-sized camp on the right side of the lower third of Nankoweap Rapid. A large cobble bar eddy appears on the right. The camp is at the upper end of this eddy, but there is also a good camp at the lower end. It is a good idea to stop here and scout the Main and Lower Nankoweap camps to see if they are occupied if you plan to camp at one of those sites.

Mile 52.5, Right - Nankoweap Canyon enters the river here and offers many hiking opportunities.

This panorama from the granary at Nankoweap is a variation of a classic photograph of the Grand Canyon. (Duwain Whitis)

No camping or landing on right bank between mile 52.5 and 53.5 except at named camps. Only one party per camp.
